NSC BRIEFING

15 November 1956

LATE HUNGARIAN NEWS

- I. International News Service in Vienna, citing a Budapest broadcast of 15 November, reports that Kadar regime has made "additional promises" to the population. On the surface these are perhaps the most significant yet announced.
 - A. Kadar pledged "free elections" in the "near future" but coupled his pledge with statement that participating parties all must have "socialist principles."
 - B. Kadar also promised to end deportations to the USSR-presumably when the general strike ends and order has been restored.
 - C. He also stated that he could see no reason why expremier Imre Nagy--whose return to power has been demanded by workers and youth groups--could not join the government. (Nagy, reportedly holed up in the Yugoslav legation together with several other former ministries, has allegedly refused Kadar's appeals for his support.)
- LI. At the same time, Kadar made clear his regime's opposition both to Hungarian neutrality—as long as the world is in its present shape—and to the immediate withdrawal of Soviet forces—this will have to wait until things have DOCUMENTNO Settled down.

1. The timing of free elections and Soviet troop withdrawal apparently were not related to each other in Kadar's remarks, but they might be in the future: i.e., there is nothing to prevent Soviet forces from "supervising" the "free elections."
